If something happened to you, how long would it take to trace your next of kin?

Identification. Next of Kin. Medical Alerts.

ISSUE 01/10

On average, it takes FIVE TO SIX hours to trace family members after an emergency, be it a road traffic accident, falling ill, or simply becoming lost or disorientated.

In life threatening situations, your family members may be notified too late, or for those with certain medical conditions, inappropriate treatment may be given.

Over half of us have made no provision for the emergency services to contact our next of kin if we are involved in an accident or emergency, at home or abroad.

In addition, less than one in five adults carry their important medical information on them.

What is Contact4Me?

Contact4Me, founded in the wake of the 7th July 2005 bombings in London, is now the UK's leading identification, next of kin and medical alert notification service.

Contact4Me ensures that if anything should happen to you, those who are first on the scene receive fast and secure access to your identity, next of kin and your vital medical alerts.

And to become a member of Contact4Me costs as little as 30 pence a week - a small price to pay for a call that could save your life.

Contact4Me delivers peace of mind 24 hours a day, 365 days per year.

How does Contact4Me work?

- Once registered you will receive a pack with various items of identification - each with a unique membership number and 24/7 telephone number
- After an incident, emergency services call our helpline, quoting the unique membership number and are put through to the first of a list of up to 10 contacts, as well as being given any vital medical alerts

How much does it cost?
Total peace of mind for less than 30p per week

Membership type	1st year	Subsequent years
Single member	£16	£12
1st additional member	£12	£8
Each further member	£8	£5
